Boe Henderson, who was in Glace Bay helping the labor candidates in the last provincial election, has been nominated as candidate by the Labor party in Montreal and will have for an opponent C. C. Ballantyne, Minister of Marine and Fisheries. Mrs. Henderson has the power of swaying the people in favor of principles of justice honor and truth and should poll a large vote.

The labor movement does not wish to change human nature. The labor movement desires to remove the obstacles which prevent the native goodness in man from finding expression at the present time.

Sir John Willison, the publicist and Conservative of Toronto says that some people say the Meighen party will win only forty seats. Sir John declares that this is wrong, that the Meighen party will have fifty-five representatives out of the two hundred and thirty-five to be elected in the next House of Commons.

FRANCE MAY AID RUSSIA

NEW YORK. (Associated Press.)

France may be the first nation to offer a loan to the Russian government, according to Leonid Krasin, who explains, in an article in the November issue of "Soviet Russia," the reasons on which this surprising possibility is based.

Krasin calls attention to the well-known fact that the interests of capitalist Europe and America imperatively demand that a loan be made to Russia, in order that she may become the purchaser of the great surplus of materials which cannot find buyers elsewhere. England and Germany and the Scandinavian countries, he points out, already have secured advantages in the Russian market by concluding trade agreements with the Soviet government, and he draws the conclusion that the only way France can hope to gain entrance into this profitable field is by offering a loan to Russia.

"Let me say that this question will become acute first of all in France."

The article continues: "The same France which has tried, as no other country has, to boycott Soviet Russia in the most stubborn manner, which has been the instigator of all the haste of every kind to Russia, of interventions, uprisings, etc. It will be France in the first place, we think, that must give the money."

"France must give us money for the reason that, owing to the stupid policy it has been following thus far and which has brought her to the point of complete isolation, the only way by which she can save for herself even a part of her claims on Russia will be by granting us a new loan. Only on these conditions will France be able to obtain a recognition on our part of any of the debts of the former governments of Russia and the main demand of France on us has been precisely for the payment of this indebtedness."

She Knew the Symptoms

"Madam," announced the new maid, "your husband is lying unconscious in the reception hall with a large box beside him and crushing a paper in his hand."
"Ah," cried the mistress in ecstasy, "my new hat has come!"

for Catholics may co-operate with Socialists. After pointing out that particular Socialist bodies have sometimes attacked the Church, he goes on to say:

Dr. McQuillen's Views

It is evident that no Catholic can be a member of a society such as those. The question becomes more difficult and requires more accurate handling when Socialists say, as most of them do now, that they do not interfere with religion at all but deal solely with economics or politics. Even here Catholics must not join with them unreservedly, because in the domain of economics and politics there enter matters so closely connected with the sacred tenets of religion which the Catholic Church jealously guards that she warns her children of possible heresy or sin under another name. Thus in on "The Condition of the Working Classes" (sometimes known under its Latin title, Rerum Novarum) which Catholics look upon as the best economic treatise of the Nineteenth Century, the Pope condemns that form of Socialism or Communism which deprives man of all private property and lays down authoritatively that Catholics must admit the right of every individual to possess as his own not merely what perishes in the use, e.g., food, but also what remains after use, e.g., clothing, shelter. He teaches this because it is necessary for the freedom and personal dignity of human beings both in themselves and as heads of families. But it must be carefully remembered that he goes no further (and he has been more precise on this question than any other Pope).

On this subject I strongly recommend an excellent little pamphlet by Father Canaan, S. J., "How Far May a Catholic Agree with Socialists?" (C.T.S., Dublin), where this question is treated in a lucid and scholarly fashion. I submit, then that There are Some Forms of Socialism which Contain Nothing Anti-Catholic.

They do not touch religion at all in their political or economic aspect they are far less dangerous than Liberalism, Terrorism, Capitalism, Communism, and yet very few Catholic societies have had the courage to ask:

Can a Catholic be a Capitalist or Communist?

In support of what I say I give two quotations. Father Rode Jarrett, Provincial of the Dominicans, in his pamphlet, "The Church's Highway" (C.T.S., London), says (page 16)

"As a pure economic solution of modern conditions the Church has not one word to say to Socialism."
